3. The University’s basic philosophy concerning unfair discriminatory treatment based on disability and reasonable accommodation

(1) Unfair discriminatory treatment
“Unfair discriminatory treatment” means refusing to provide students with disabilities opportunities in education, research and any other of the general activities implemented by the University based on disability and without justifiable reason. It also means, in the course of the provision of these opportunities, violating the rights and interests of students with disabilities by placing upon them restrictions on time and place or conditions not placed upon students without disabilities.

With regard to whether or not a reason is justifiable, judgments in each individual case shall be made following comprehensive and objective consideration of actual situations, etc. based on the perspective of maintaining the rights and interests of students with disabilities and third parties, and maintaining the objectives, content and functions of the education, research and other activities implemented by the University; faculty and staff members shall, in the event that they judge that there is a justifiable reason, explain the reason(s) to students with disabilities and strive to obtain their understanding.
(2) Reasonable accommodation

“Reasonable accommodation” means necessary and appropriate modifications and adjustments, which are needed in a particular case but do not impose an excessive or undue burden, to ensure that students with disabilities enjoy, on an equal basis, all human rights and fundamental freedoms.

With regard to excessive burdens, the extent of the following factors (i) to (iii) shall be taken into consideration in each individual case, and judgments shall be made following comprehensive and objective consideration of actual situations, etc. Faculty and staff members shall in the event that they judge that an excessive burden is being imposed, explain the reason(s) for this to students with disabilities and strive to obtain their understanding.

(i) Influence on education, research and other activities implemented by the University (whether or not their objectives, content or functions will be impaired)

(ii) Extent to which responsible accommodation is practically feasible (physical and technical restrictions, human and systematic restrictions)

(iii) Extent of financial and other burdens

4. Promotional system regarding the elimination of discrimination based on disability

The University’s system regarding the promotion of the elimination of discrimination based on disability is as follows.

(1) The director of the system shall be the President, under whose leadership the University shall strive to promote the elimination of discrimination against persons with disabilities.

(2) The leading manager of the system shall be the Vice-President (Student Affairs), who will assist the director in their duties, and strive to both ascertain the situation throughout the entire University and ensure that support is smoothly implemented at each faculty, department and school.

(3) The persons in charge of the support system for students with disabilities in each faculty, department and school shall be the respective Dean (or Principal in the case of High Schools, etc.), and they shall implement the requisite decisions for the elimination of discrimination against students with disabilities at their faculty, department or school and develop an environment to help achieve this aim.

5. Prohibition of unfair discriminatory treatment

Faculty and staff members of the University must not, in the course of their work or business, violate the rights and interests of students with disabilities by treating them in a manner that is unfair and discriminatory in comparison with the treatment of those without disabilities.

6. Provision of reasonable accommodation

In the event that students with disabilities express their wishes about removing social barriers to faculty and staff members of the University and the removal of the barriers is not an excessive burden, they shall provide reasonable accommodation(s) in order not to violate the rights and interests of students with disabilities.

When it is clear that the student in question requires the removal of barriers, including even when their wishes are expressed with the help of family members or when no wishes are explicitly expressed, faculty and staff members shall strive to suggest the reasonable accommodation that is thought to be appropriate for the student.
